Engaging Patients to Improve Diagnosis

Diagnostic errors are a common, yet harmful and costly issue in healthcare. They are estimated to affect 12 million Americans every year, and the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine (NAEM) note that “all of us will likely experience a meaningful diagnostic error in our lifetime.”

New Study Finds Rising Health Benefit Costs

Employee benefits comprise, on average, a third of total employee compensation costs. When there's a spike in the cost of the biggest benefit — health coverage — employers take notice. A recent study highlights the possible reasons that health benefit costs spiked in 2021 and ways that proactive employers may be able to respond to help keep those costs at bay in 2022 and beyond.
